Principal's Announcements

The Most Holy Trinity

Three Persons—One God

"God so loved the world..." This is one of the best-known phrases from the Bible. It's not at all uncommon to see "John 3:16" on placards at sporting events or even on roadside billboards. It has become emblematic of the whole Gospel of Jesus Christ because it tells us in brief about the whole of salvation history and the Father's plan for the human race. In Jesus, the Father's only Son, the Father announces not only his intent to save the world, but also his very divine identity as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

In the Person of Christ, these two dimensions of the Gospel, redemption and revelation, are intimately united. By revealing who he is, God simultaneously reveals his saving love. The God who loves us to the end as St. John will later say in Chapter 13 in his Gospel reveals the depth of that love first in his self-revelation to us that he is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Out of the immense fire of love that God is in himself the eternal exchange of love between the three divine Persons comes the saving love of Christ's Incarnation. The pierced side of our Savior on the Cross pierces our hearts to reveal the essence of Trinitarian love. The immensity of the divine love, in both its redeeming and revealing dimensions, fills us with the confidence that he comes not to condemn the world, but so that we "might not perish but have eternal life."

This week we say goodbye to our 8th graders. They will graduate on Friday night. We thank God for our 8th Graders... for their friendship and laughter; for their learning and growing. We pray for them as they journey into the future, that they will be safely held within God's loving hand. Before they graduate, they will have a week of festivities to give them a send-off that they will remember for years to come.

Oregon Denies Adoption After Woman Refuses to Back Gender Ideology, Homosexuality

Tyler Arnold/CNA, Nation, April 6, 2023

An Oregon woman filed a federal lawsuit against the state's Department of Human Services after she was denied the opportunity to adopt a child because she refused to express support for gender ideology and homosexuality. The woman, Jessica Bates, filed an application to become certified to adopt a child from the Oregon foster care system. However, to obtain the certification, a person must agree to "respect, accept and support the ... sexual orientation, gender identity [and] gender expression ... of a child or young adult" who is placed in the home, according to the state's policy.

Although Bates promised to love and treat any child as her own, she told the certification officer that she "would not support their lifestyle or encourage any behavior related to their sexual orientation or gender identity or expression" if it went against her religious beliefs. The certification officer asked whether she would use a child's preferred pronouns if he or she ever identified as transgender and whether she would assist a child with transitioning his or her gender through hormone therapy. Bates said she would not.

Because her stance did not comply with DHS regulations, her application was denied. A spokesperson for the state agency was not immediately available for comment Thursday.

Bates, who is receiving pro bono legal representation from Alliance Defending Freedom, argued in her lawsuit that this requirement infringes on her First Amendment rights to freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and freedom of religion.

"Oregon's policy amounts to an ideological litmus test: people who hold secular or 'progressive' views on sexual orientation and gender identity are eligible to participate in child welfare programs, while people of faith with religiously informed views are disqualified because they don't agree with the state's orthodoxy," ADF Senior Counsel Jonathan Scruggs said in a statement.

"The government can't exclude certain communities of faith from foster care and adoption services because the state doesn't like their particular religious beliefs," he said. Read more here: bit.ly/3qaOZlc
